ABSTRACT

The financial health of a company is determined by not only the values shown on the financial performance but also the relationship among these values. Financial performance and ratio analysis these relationships are known as financial ratios. Good steel industries financial management includes monitoring the critical financial ratios and comparing them to other companies in the industry. We look at ratios that are commonly used to measure the performance of the company, regardless of its industrial segment. Where necessary these ratios are adapted to the unique characteristics found in the steel industry. As suggested earlier, various users approach financial performance analysis with many different objectives. Creditors are interested in whether a company will be able to repay its debts on time. Both creditors and stockholders are concerned with how the company is financed, whether through Debt, equity, or earnings.

Stockholders and potential investors analyse past earnings performance and dividend policy for clues to the future value of their investments. In addition to using internally generated data to analysed operations, company managers find much information prepared for external purposes useful for examining past operations and planning future policies. The study covers a period of 5 years from 2015 -2020: The secondary data were extracted from the published annual reports of the study units for a period of five years. The data have been analysed with the help of different accounting and statistical techniques such as ratio analysis. This financial analysis involves studying various relationships between different items reported in a set of financial performance. This research evaluates to a firms financial performance in order to point out the strengths and weaknesses of the firm, and the areas that need improvement. The researcher has suggested suitable measures to improve the efficiency of the financial analysis of the Sri Alamelu Steel Limited at Salem.

A STUDY ON CAPITAL STRUCTURE AND FINANCIAL PERFORMANCE

ABSTRACT

Capital structure is the proportion of debt and equity financing of a firm. It indicates how the company operation of a business is financed. A firm with significantly more debt than equity is regarded as highly leveraged. Vice versa, a firm with significantly more equity than debt is considered to be low leveraged.

Debt finance is usually cheaper and preferred than equity finance. This is because debt finance is safer from a debt holder's point of view. Interest has to be paid before dividend. In the incident of liquidation, debt finance is paid before equity. This makes debt a safer investment than equity and hence, debt holders demand a lower rate or return than equity investors. Debt interest is also corporation tax deductible (unlike equity dividends), making it even cheaper to a tax paying company. Arrangement costs are generally lower on debt finance than equity finance and likewise, unlike equity arrangement costs, they are also tax deductible.

Although debt is attractive because of its cheap costs, its disadvantage is that interest has to be paid. If it is over-borrowed, the company may not be able to obligate the interest and principal payments and thus, liquidation may follow. Therefore, there are bankruptcy costs to be borne by the company if the company uses debt financing. The level of a company's borrowings is usually measured by the gearing ratio (the ratio of debt finance to equity finance) and companies must make sure that this does not become too high. Comparisons with other companies in the industry or with the company's recent history are useful here.

The choice of capital structure for firms is by and large the most fundamental issue of the financial framework of a business entity. The main focus of the paper is on the financing Decisions of the firms and to investigate whether these issuance decisions are consistent with market timing behavior or traditional theories notably trade-off and pecking order Theories. The study also gives more importance to the effects of two major factors market Performance and profitability of the firms in determining the type of finance that they issue. In order to increase the scope of drawing inference and differentiating between the theories of capital structure the dual issuers are included in the study as a separate issue type. Dual Issuers are considered to be an important issue type since they can alter the capital structure at a much lesser cost. The Dual issuers in case of the Indian corporate sample considered in this study show that highly profitable firms, firms with high-market-to-book ratio, larger Firms and firms that invest more in R&D are dual issuers. This shows that more healthy Firms in the Indian context issue debt and equity simultaneously rather than go for a single Issue type. The paper also concludes that the results are unequivocally consistent with the Market timing theory. However, particular impact of pecking order and tradeoff on the Financing decisions cannot be justified.

ABSTRACT:

This paper examined the Welfare measures of employees with reference to Smatrix Infotech, Chennai. Employees play a key role in the existence and growth of any organisation, therefore their welfare is essential. Employees' welfare facilities include housing facilities, free medical facilities, retirement benefits, children and adult educational benefits, welfare measures for the employee's families, loan facilities, etc. If the organisations do not bother about the employees benefit, but expect efficient and high performance from them, it is a mere waste. So there is utmost need for the employee's welfare in any type of organisation. Organizations have to provide welfare facilities to their employees to keep their motivation levels high. A comparative study was undertaken to know the satisfaction level of the employees on the enforceability of various welfare measures in both the public and private sector organizations. The study also throws light on impact of welfare measures on the employees' performance.

ABSTRACT

The project entitled EMPLOYEES STRESS LEVEL MANAGEMENT, KARUR. Stress at the workplace has become an increasing phenomenon due to external factors such as technological advancement, changes in the economy of a country which might lead to becoming redundant and so on. Stress can be considered as an inevitable condition at least at one point in time or another; however it can also be minimized to the extent that the productivity and health of the employee is maintained which could lead to a productive organization. Stress is also bound to occur in multinational companies where operation is global and employees have different cultural background. : Our purpose for this study is to have a clear understanding of the causes of stress at a multinational company such as Volvo Trucks AB Umeå, and how Stress by the employees as well as the company's management are managed or handled. Our purpose for this study is to have a clear understanding of the causes of stress at a multinational company such as Volvo Trucks AB Umeå, and how Stress by the employees as well as the company's management are managed or handled. This thesis has been made using qualitative approach, with a descriptive and exploratory case study approach. The data used are collected through conducting semistructured interviews with 6 different employees from Volvo Trucks AB, Umeå one of whom works as a therapist at the company.

Findings: The causes of stress at the work place range from personal problems to work overload, physical working environment, work situation and conflicts among colleagues and managers. Many employees struggle with stress, in worst cases leading to uncertainties and severe impairments on health and performance. The main situations that generate stress are likely uncontrollable, unpredictable, and some are not known. But alternatively there are several resources available like personal awareness in coping skills. For example: time management, assertiveness, ways to higher up self-confidence and so on. Management can also utilize some resources for reducing the stress level of the employees by providing services and facilities such as health facilities at the company, giving easy and on time access to therapist and also having free time activities and entertainment. Stress is related between the employee and the employer as the performance of the employee is affected by his/her stress level which intern affects the company's productivity. Therefore stress management is Vital for both. The most successful stress management mechanisms found was time management, sharing of feelings and leisure activities.

BUSINESS FORECASTING OF ESTIMATE
PREDICTION OF FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

A STUDY ON FINANCIAL DERIVATIVES
(FUTURES & OPTIONS)

ABSTRACT

The emergence of the market for derivatives products, most notably forwards, futures and options. Derivatives are risk management instruments, which derive their value from an underlying asset. The following are three broad categories of participants in the derivatives market Hedgers, Speculators and Arbitraders. The Derivative markets have gained importance in terms of their vital role in the economy. The increasing investments in stocks (domestic as well as overseas) have attracted my interest in this area. The derivative market is newly started in India and it is not known by every investor, so SEBI has to take steps to create awareness among the investors about the derivative segment. In cash market the profit/loss of the investor depends on the market price of the underlying asset. The investor may incur huge profit or he may incur huge loss. But in derivatives segment the investor enjoys huge profits with limited downside. Derivatives are mostly used for hedging purpose. In order to increase the derivatives market in India, SEBI should revise some of their regulations like contract size, participation of FII in the derivatives market. In a nutshell the study throws a light on the derivatives market.

ABSTRACT

Employees are major assets of any organization. The active role they play towards a company's success cannot be underestimated. As a result, equipping these unique assets through effective training becomes imperative in order to maximize the job performance. Also position them to take on the challenges of the today's competitive business climate. Although extensive research has been conducted in the area of Human Resource Management, the same cannot be said on employee training especially as it concerns developing countries. The primary data are collected from the respondents by using a well structured questionnaire through the survey method. The secondary data are collected from the company profile, magazine, journal, publication and websites. This research provides a reasonable suggestion and conclusion as the company.

A STUDY ON MARKETING STRATEGIES OF OPPO AND ITS CONSUMER BEHAVIOUR

A STUDY ON MARKETING DERIVATIVES

ABSTRACT

Marketing strategy is the comprehensive plan formulated particularly for achieving the marketing objectives of the organization. It provides a blueprint for attaining these marketing objectives. It is the building block of a marketing plan. It is designed after detailed marketing research. A marketing strategy helps an organization to concentrate its scarce resources on the best possible opportunities so as to increase the sales. Among the progress and growth of developed and developing economies in the world, India has become one of the fastest growing economies throughout the world. Indian economy has placed in the fourth position by the year 2050 according to Goldman Sachs BRICS. One of the dazzling facts that grow India's economic cycle has been the dynamism of the service sector.

Consumer perception & buying behaviour is a marketing tool and a definite value added benefit. It is often perceived by customers as important as the primary product service your organizations offers. It looks at what is involved from 3 different angles, the first is from the view of an organizations wishing to understand, and measures, how satisfied its customer are with the products and services they receive from it. Finally it considers the issue from the perspective of consumers who participate in surveys, including both business customer and general public.
